

Boudewijn van Eijck

Partner

In his nationwide law practice, Boudewijn van Eijck (admitted to the Bar in 1987) handles major fraud and environmental crime cases, as well as lawsuits resulting from calamities in, a/o, the industry and commercial and industrial construction. He often acts as coordinating counsel, the central point of contact for the client(s), leading a team of lawyers.

On several occasions he was part of a world-wide legal team, defending both foreign companies with interests in the Netherlands and Dutch companies abroad.

Among his clientele are many waste processing companies and construction companies. Over the past years, he has successfully defended various large companies in major cases (such as the bunker oil cases in the port of Rotterdam, the national Bouwfraude – construction industry fraud – case, the collapsed balcony case in Maastricht and the fire at a waste processing plant in Drachten).

For many years, he has also been defending police officers in shooting and other violent incidents.

He is also a specialist in medical criminal law and as such advises and, if necessary, defends (teaching) hospitals and medical professionals.

In his advice practice, he maps out criminal risks for the corporate world and designs internal company protocols in order to prevent criminal liability. As such, he advises Supervisory Boards, Boards of Directors and/or shareholders.

Because Boudewijn is fluent in Spanish, he is often involved in cases on Spanish soil where Dutch legal interests are in play.
